

Description du lieu

The Château de La Roche Goyon (Fort La Latte) is a 14th century Fort castle, built on two rocky promontories, very steep forming a peninsula. Two bridges allow you to cross the crevasses that separate the castle from the rest of the coast. The castle is isolated, surrounded by cliffs and surrounded by the sea, the fortress spreads over 8000 m2 while retaining its medieval appearance, it offers a wild and ideal setting for a period film, even fantastic. There is a vegetable patch, medieval garden and labyrinth on site, which decorate the castle.

Walls, châtelets of entry, barbican, towers oblivion, keep, chapel crossed the centuries and its so many medieval traces. The main house with its large room has kept a medieval aspect with its fireplace
